

ECED-1120 GUIDING YOUNG CHILDREN 3 CREDITS

SYLLABUS

CATALOG DESCRIPTION

This course explores various theories of child guidance and the practical applications of each. It provides developmentally appropriate methods for guiding children and effective strategies and suggestions for facilitating positive social interactions. Strategies for preventing challenging behaviors through the use of environment, routines and schedule will be presented. Emphasis is placed on helping children become self-responsible, competent, independent, and cooperative learners and including families as part of the guidance approach.

This course is part of the required program of study for an Associate of Arts degree in Early Childhood Education. The following objectives are taken from the New Mexico State Department of Education's Common Core Competencies for early childhood professionals (see Common Core Content manual). Upon completion of this course, students will be able to demonstrate the following competencies at the established level of proficiency.

General Learning Objectives:

1. Philosophy and foundation of Guidance and a problem-solving approach to behavior in young children.
2. Environment and Methods for using Guidance and a problem-solving approach to behavior.
3. Social considerations for approaches to young children's behavior.

Specific Learning Outcomes:

1. Philosophy and foundation of Guidance and a problem-solving approach to behavior in young children.
 - a. Articulate a personal philosophy of appropriate early care and education that responds to practices that support inclusion and cultural and linguistic diversity through actions and attitudes.
 - b. Demonstrate knowledge and skill in the use of developmentally appropriate guidance techniques and strategies that provide opportunities to assist children in developing positive thoughts and feelings about themselves and others through cooperative interaction with peers and adults.
2. Environment and Methods for using Guidance and a problem-solving approach to behavior.
 - a. Demonstrate understanding of the influence of the physical setting, schedule, routines, and transitions on children and use these experiences to promote children's development and learning.
 - b. Demonstrate knowledge of varying program models and learning environments that meet the individual needs of all young children, including those with special needs.
 - c. Appropriately plan, maintain, and facilitate the use of indoor and outdoor learning environments to promote each child's physical and emotional well-being.
 - d. Use appropriate guidance to support the development of self-regulatory capacities in young children.
3. Social considerations for approaches to young children's behavior.
 - a. Demonstrate knowledge of maintaining appropriate records of children's development and behavior that safeguard confidentiality and privacy.
 - b. Demonstrate understanding of the effects of family stress on the behavior of children and other family members.
 - c. Assist young children and their families, as individually appropriate, in developing decision-making and interpersonal skills that enable them to make healthy choices and establish health-promoting behaviors.
 - d. Recognize signs of emotional distress, child abuse, and neglect in young children and use procedures appropriate to the situation, such as initiating discussions with families, referring to the appropriate professionals, and in cases of suspected abuse or neglect, reporting to designated authorities.
